Fórum Municipal Luísa Todi

Home is where our story begins

Setúbal Youth Ensemble
Maria João vocalist
Rui Borges Maia conductor

The Setúbal Youth Ensemble began in 2014 and has already made its mark at home and abroad as a uniquely diverse 'orchestra' of young musicians. Newly commissioned works by Eloise Gynn from Britain and Sara Ross from Portugal reflect the theme of home in different ways. Maria João, one of the world's leading jazz vocalists, has generously agreed to be "godmother" to the Ensemble.

Welcome
– make yourself at home!

The Setúbal Music Festival is now in its eighth edition and continues to be a unique cultural phenomenon, bringing together internationally acclaimed guest artists, from Portugal and overseas, with the local community – including almost 1,500 young people – in making music and enriching the cultural life of this lovely and welcoming city.

Each year, our Festival programme has gained its inspiration and integrity through topical themes which the people of Setúbal really care about. This year's central idea of home has various important meanings which cannot be captured in the Portuguese language simply by a singular word, as in English, and demand several distinct translations: lugares, lar, em casa, raízes, origens, ... Reflecting the rich cultural diversity of the people for whom Setúbal is home, our creative and performing artists have responded with great imagination and in wonderfully different ways. The idea of home naturally touches and embraces the themes of all our seven previous editions, none more so than our most recent focus on migration in 2017 which continues inevitably to influence our society and, therefore, our programming.

We are delighted to welcome a number of outstanding artists, from nearby and far away, who are making their first appearances in the Festival. Traditional singer and accordionist Celina da Piedade, a star born and shining brightly in the Setúbal region, sets the scene for us at home in the opening concert, with her own band, traditional Alentejo singers, young musicians from Setúbal and a special guest appearance by João Gil. The next evening opens with the renowned Portuguese Symphony Orchestra, taking time away from their home in the National Theatre of São Carlos to visit us with an international programme and joining forces with the 'homecoming' musicians of our Festival Camerata and the Conservatoires of Palmela and Setúbal, directed by the award-winning young Portuguese conductor, Nuno Coelho. Other highlights include performances led by London-based German-Egyptian artiste, Merit Ariane, and a return visit by the choral maestro, Pedro Teixeira, this time with his Ricercare Choir from Lisbon. We close with our unique and inspiring Setúbal Youth Ensemble, joined by the great jazz singer Maria João. As always, the creativity and performances of many of Setúbal's young people provide the lifeblood and purpose of the Festival.

We owe a huge debt of gratitude to the initiative and support of the Helen Hamlyn Trust, to the Municipality of Setúbal and to the many local partners, institutions and individuals, whose efforts make it all happen.

Visitors to the Festival can enjoy performances and presentations in several of Setúbal's beautiful and historic buildings. The past meets the present not only in the city's architecture and open spaces but also in its vibrant cultural life, and the Festival is a reflection of this. We invite you to experience the unique personality of this city and feel at home in the welcoming diversity of its artistic offerings.

Programme: Sibelius Lemminkäinen and the Maidens of the Island, Britten Peter Grimes, Four Sea Interludes, Smetana Šárka (My Country), António Laertes Patria's Ouverture, Lopes-Graça Five Old Portuguese Romances, Sibelius Finlandia

Like the different dialects and accents found in the languages spoken around the world, most forms of music carry in their sound-worlds the individual voices of their composers and the distinctive nature of their places. Many composers have drawn on the folk songs and dances or the myths and legends of the places which they call home: some, like those included in this concert, have gone still further and created music which captures the very essence of their homelands and somehow define their national identities. This programme also celebrates Portuguese talent, including Nuno Coelho who won the Prémio Jovens Músicos in 2016, and the festive homecoming of some of Setúbal's professional musicians currently living and working elsewhere in the world.

Merit and groups of young people from Setúbal share songs and stories they have created, inspired by the idea of birds' nests. Birds migrate, traversing real and imaginary boundaries, between countries, between sky and land, magic and reality. They create their homes wherever they migrate - and sing their own songs - here in Mourisca.
